Jasna is a beautiful girl in her mid-teens, leading a crude life of the postwar generation in Serbia. With a terminally ill father and a dispirited mother, she is disillusioned and angry with everyone and everything, including herself. Having huge crush on a boy from school, she goes on a spree of sex, drugs and partying, constantly filming with her mobile phone. Clip is an controversial portray of contemporary teen generation along the same lines as Larry Clark's Kids.
