Short synopsis

In this unique cinematic experience, filmmaker Margreth Olin allows viewers to experience Norway's landscapes of mountains, glaciers, and fjords, guided by her 84-year-old father, Jørgen, enabling us to escape the hyperactivity of modern times and absorb the profundity of nature.

Long synopsis

The mountainous landscapes of Norway provide the monumental backdrop for the cinematic nature experience of the year. A magnificent, existential journey with the filmmaker's parents as its human yardstick, and with the primordial forces of the earth looming in the bedrock. Margreth Olin has created a stunning, cinematic work about life, death, nature and simply being present in the world. The level of detail in her lyrical and visionary poem to her homeland is almost beyond anything seen on the big screen. And that is most definitely where 'Songs of Earth' should be experienced.
